

Master of International Public Policy and Management

Designed expressly for international students, the USC Price School's Master of International Public Policy and Management (MIPM) is an interdisciplinary degree that provides a comparative focus on policy and social issues. It is a premier program for early to mid-career professionals interested in working cross-culturally and cross-sectorally with colleagues from around the globe in an immersive environment.

The MIPM program offers an academic curriculum with a dual emphasis on public policy and management. MIPM students represent a diversity of professions and have interests that span the range of public policy disciplines. Students can customize their educational and professional objectives by selecting among specialization areas offered by the Price School:

- Public Management & Finance
- Environmental Policy & Planning
- Transportation Policy & Planning
- Housing Policy & Real Estate
- Business/Social Entrepreneurship
- Data Science & Analytical Methods
- International & Economic Development
- Education Management & Policy
- Health Policy & Management
- Communication & Media
- Nonprofit Management/Social Innovation
- Public-Private Partnerships/Collaboration

MIPM'S UNIQUE FEATURES INCLUDE:

Immersion in a global context that blends academic knowledge with real-world applications;
Trans-disciplinary faculty with international expertise who orient their focus to students' countries;

Multicultural diversity with a wide network of more than 1,000+ alumni from 45 different countries;

Global impact adhering to the Price mission to improve the quality of life for people and their communities here and abroad;

Opportunities to engage with policymakers and distinguished practitioners;

A flexible program that is designed to be completed in two years, but may be accelerated to finish sooner.

“Attending this program has been an eye-opening journey that exceeded my expectations with its diverse group of professionals and comprehensive coverage of public policy disciplines. I enjoyed studying with fellows from government officials, nonprofit leaders, urban planners, and social entrepreneurs. The blend of backgrounds and perspectives created an exhilarating learning space that continuously pushed me to explore complex issues from myriad angles”

— Agil Wibowo (MIPM '23)

Organization Performance Analyst, Ministry of Finance, The Republic of Indonesia

“The biggest strength of MIPM is that it brings together a diverse and global cohort of people from different professions, so that you broaden your outlook while learning first-hand from the practices of other countries. The perspectives gained through interactive discussions cannot be replicated by reading books or viewing social media. As a civil servant who develops and implements policy, this was an invaluable experience.”

— Yeonhi Jeong (MIPM '21)

Civil Servant, Ministry of Health and Welfare, Republic of Korea
